Chapter 1 by Eva

"Mamma, why do we have to leave England?" I asked grumpily while we boarded the large ship. "Hannah, you've asked me before. It's because of your pappa's work. I don't think the "new land" will be to upside down after all, I've received letters from some of my friends who live there now. They say it's like the beginning of a new life and theres all sorts of new foods and animals, trust me dear you'll be fine." My mothers comforting smile warmed me right down to my toes. "Hannah, put your luggage here then we can go to the lady's tea room you might make a friend or two." I did as I was told and joined my mother in the tea room. After a few sips of tea this ship began to move and it was impossible to drink anymore. It was the beginning of a long journey to a new land that might just happen to change my life.
